
ABRAHAM SOLODAR

Jewish Poet and Scholar Stricken in Chicago at 44.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Abraham Solodar, 44 years old, Jewish poet and scholar, died suddenly today of a heart attack in his room at 436 South Central Park Avenue. Mr. Solodar recently received his Master of Arts degree at Northwestern University. He had been engaged in a translation of Walt Whitman's works into Hebrew.

In addition to editing the Hebrew Dorenu, a monthly Jewish paper, Mr. Solodar taught classes at the Hebrew Theological College and the College of Jewish Studies.

His widow and two children are in Palestine.

The New York Times

Published: November 15, 1936

Copyright © The New York Times